"JONES."

[The Boston Advertiser copies the subjoined "truthful poetry" from the Macon (Georgia) Telegraph, with the remark that "it is quite too good to be enjoyed by the farmers of Georgia alone." We are of the same opinion, and therefore publish it, and commend its perusal to our Kentucky farmers who "can't make their land pay" and are always talking about going West. The fate of Jones is that which awaits nine tenths of the discontented and dissatisfied emigrants, who sell out their old homesteads and emigrate with the expectation of finding a new land flowing with milk and honey somewhere else.]

I knew a man and he lived in Jones—
Which Jones is a county of red hills and stones—
And he lived pretty much by getting of loans,
And his mules were nothing but skin and bones,
And his hogs were flat as his corn bread pones,
And he had 'bout a thousand acres of land.

This man—and his name was also Jones—
He swore that he'd leave them old red hills and stones,
And he swore that he'd leave them old red hills and stones,
And he swore that he'd leave them old red hills and stones.

For he couldn't make nothin' but yellowish cotton,
And little of that, for his fences were rotten,
And what little cotton he had, that was bought—en

And he couldn't get a living from the land,
And the longer he swore the madder he got,
And he swore and he walked to the stable lot,
And he hallowed to Tom to come there and look at it.

For to emigrate somewhere where the land was rich,
And to quit raising cock-burs, thistles and such,
And to quit raising cock-burs, thistles and such,
And to quit raising cock-burs, thistles and such.

So him and Tom they hitched up their mules,
Protesting that folks were mighty big fools
That had say in Georgia their lifetime out,
Just scratching a living, when all of them ought

Got places in Texas where cotton would sprout
By the time you could plant it in the land.

And he drove by a house where a man named Brown
Was living, not far from the edge of the town,
And he hauled Brown for to buy his place,
And said that seeing as money was scarce,

And seeing as sherrits were hard to face,
Two dollars an acre would get the land.

They closed at a dollar and fifty cents,
And Jones he bought him a wagon and tents,
And loaded his corn, and his woman, and truck,
And moved to Texas, which it took

His entire pile, with the best of luck,
To get there and get him a little land.

But Brown moved out on the old Jones farm,
And he rolled up his breeches and bared his
And he picked all the rocks from off the ground,
And he rooted it up and ploughed it down.

And sowed his corn and wheat in the land.
Five years glid by, and Brown, one day
Who got so fat that he wouldn't weigh
Was a sitting down, sorter lazily.

To the bulleest dinner you ever see.
When one of the children jumped on his knee
And says, "Yan's Jones, which you bought his land."

And there was Jones, standing out at the fence,
And he hadn't no wagon, nor mules, nor tents,
For he had left Texas about and come,
To Georgia to see if he couldn't get some

Employment, and he was looking as humble as if he had never owned any land.

Brown he asked him in, and he set him down to his victuals smoking hot,
And when he had filled himself and the floor,
Brown looked at him sharp, and rove and swore.

That "whether man's land was rich or poor,
There was more in the man than there was in the land."

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN BARBERSVILLE.—The business portion of this town was nearly destroyed by fire on the night of the 21st inst., supposed to be the work of an incendiary.

Messrs. Bradford & Hudson, druggists, lost heavily, say $4,000 in merchandise, books, &c., as did also Green Elliott, general dealer. W. W. Sawyers, general merchandise, and Robert Singleton, saved most of their papers and books. The fire was first discovered in Elliott's house, and spread very rapidly. A keg of powder exploded, scattering fire and building material in all directions. The total loss will fall but little short of $20,000.—Danville Advocate.

WE learn from the Clark County Democrat that a party is in pursuit of the Webb, who were taken from jail in Winchester last week by their friends, and no doubts are entertained but that they will be captured. His Honor, W. M. Beckner, is prosecuting with vigilance this much desired object, and has called the county court together for the purpose of offering a reward for the capture of the parties who broke open the jail. Ellis Gravel, charged with participation in the affair, has been acquitted.

THE surviving soldiers of the war of 1812 will meet at Paris, Ky., on the 21st of June next.

"THE ALLY OF THIEVES."—The New York Evening Post (Rep.), after showing how South Carolina has been fleeced and robbed by an ignorant band of negroes, directed by unscrupulous carpet-baggers, says:

Unfortunately the President in the South Carolina case will act on the side of the "wing" whose handiwork has been exhibited above. The Federal Government is to be, under the Ku-Klux bill, not to redeem South Carolina from its robbers, but to fasten upon the taxpayers the rule of the scamps who are plundering it. The Federal power will appear in the Southern States, under this Ku Klux bill, as the ally of thieves, the protector of swindlers, the guardian of their plunder.

THE KU-KLUXING IN CONNECTICUT.—A preacher in Connecticut was recently Ku-Kluxed (tarred and feathered), and driven from that State, because of some evil preaching or practice.

The season for deaths by rope-jumping has not in three weeks earlier this season than last, and this crop promises to be unusually large. An interesting little girl in Akron, Ohio, was first this year, we believe. She made over three hundred jumps on Thursday, and a hundred and seventy next morning. Her funeral was very largely attended on Sunday.

Recently a thief said to a judge on circuit, quite confidently, "My lord, I really assure you I committed the theft in a weak moment; quite, indeed, against my own will, my lord, quite." "Oh! very well," said his lordship; "it is only right that you should have no cause for complaint. The offense will be met in a proper spirit. As you committed the act against your own will, you will be punished against your own will."

The first Congress was convened in New York City, on Wednesday, the 4th of March, 1789. The second Congress was held in New York. The third Congress was held in the city of Philadelphia, and began on Monday, the 2d of December, 1793. The eighth Congress of the United States held its first session at the city of Washington, on Monday, the 17th of October, 1803.

Something for grape-growers:
A handsome girl named Isabella,
The hand of Johnny Naper refused;
And in return the heartless fellow
All girls named Isabella abused.
"Get out!" she cried, "You Jack-Naper,
The Isabellas are sour grapes!"

RUMOROUS.
It doesn't hurt snuff to pinch it.
The only real Ku Klux—our old hen.
"The wife's secret!"—Her opinion of her husband.

Never attempt to form an opinion of a woman by her sighs.

Cure for the headache—Get a pretty girl to whisper in it right and morning.

A Tennesseean cured his shakes by being struck by lightning. He prefers the shaker.

A manly act in care of her kittens is an instance of severe maternal discipline. She is licking her offspring pretty much all the time.

Queen Elizabeth always displayed her worst temper in her best clothes—she was dreadfully ruffled then.

"Grandma," said a shrewd child, "do you want some candy?" "Yes, dear, I should like some." "Then if you'll buy some I'll give you half," said Polly.

The word de-b-t is composed of the initials of "dear every body twice." De-b-t is formed of the initials of "dear regularly every day—I'll trust."

JAY COOKE & CO.
OFFER FOR SALE
At Par and Accrued Interest the FIRST MORTGAGE LAND GRANT GOLD BONDS OF THE Northern Pacific Railroad Co.

These bonds are secured, first, by a First Mortgage on the Railroad itself, its tolling stock, and all equipments; second, by a First Mortgage on its entire principal and interest; and third, by the Company's assets of land to each mile of Road.
The bonds are free from United States Tax; the principal and interest are payable semi-annually at the end of this year, and the interest semi-annually at the rate of SEVEN AND THREE EIGHTHS per cent. per annum.
They are issued in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000, and $10,000.
The Trustee under the First Mortgage are Messrs. Jay Cooke, of Philadelphia, and J. Edgar Thomson, president of the Pennsylvania Central Railroad.
These Northern Pacific 7-30 Bonds will, at all times of great maturity, be receivable at TEN PER CENT. premium, and without cost to the investor. For particulars at their low sale prices.
Persons wishing to exchange stocks or other bonds for these, can do so with any of our Agents, who will give the highest current price for ALL MARKETABLE SECURITIES.
If so availing in localities remote from Banks may find no way, or other bond, directly loan by express, and we will send back Northern Pacific Bonds at our own risk, without cost to the investor. For further information, pamphlets, maps, etc., call on or address the undersigned or one of the Banks or bankers employed to sell this loan.

WE, THE UNDERSIGNED, HAVE ACCEPTED as agents for the sale of the bonds, and unconditionally recommended them to all classes, as an investment that combines a profitable rate of interest with absolute security. This affords a fine opportunity for those who are looking for government investments to exchange them for these, as they are every day being sold at a discount, thus providing one third more than the government will probably sell them for at 50c, and the present premium will thus become a profit.
Further information will be given by calling upon:

It is now said that Gen. John M. Harlan will not accept the Radical nomination for Governor. The Georgetown Times thinks that Wadsworth, of Maysville, will be the victim selected for the gubernatorial sacrifice. We trust it may be some gentleman of good speaking ability, so that we may have a lively, interesting canvass all over the State. Leslie and Carlisle will be able to meet and overthrow the very ablest men that the Radicals can bring into the field. After next Wednesday we shall probably be able to say: "Clear the track, the riders are up!"

The National Democratic Executive Committee met at Washington on Saturday last, and laid their plans for distributing documents, &c. The committee also expressed the opinion that the Joint Committee of Congress, to investigate the condition of the South, ought to go South, and not remain in Washington and summon witnesses there. A good suggestion; and if not adopted, the committee might as well adjourn and go home, for all the good they will do. As it is not the policy or desire of a majority of that committee to arrive at a knowledge of the true state of affairs in the South, we have little hope that it will leave Washington.

THE LEXINGTON RACES.—The spring meeting of the Lexington Association will begin on Monday next, 22d inst.; and, from all the indications we can gather, promises to be unusually brilliant. The stables of all the turfmen who have given it celebrity of late are full, and the stakes show a promising array of entries. With good weather, therefore, we cannot doubt there will be a large attendance.

In this connection we take occasion respectfully to request the officers of the railroad to run an extratrain for the accommodation of persons living here and at intermediate points. By the regular train it is impossible for any one to witness a race unless he stays over all night. A train to start from Frankfort at 8 A. M., each day, and return, leaving at 5 P. M., would greatly accommodate the public and would pay well.

The Fleetwood race stables of Hunt Reynolds, Esq., passed up by rail yesterday from Nashville to Lexington, to be ready for the races which take place there next week. Mr. Reynolds took one purse at Nashville with his fine colt Harvey Villain, and ran a good race with Metella. The track was very heavy during the whole week. We are glad to learn that Mr. Reynolds' horses are in good condition.

KENTUCKY MILITARY INSTITUTE.—The academic session of this popular institution is drawing to a close. The annual examination of the various classes will begin on the 23d inst., and the commencement will take place on the 8th of June. The graduating class this year, we learn, comprises nine members.

A basket picnic and dance, of huge and delightful proportions, is to come off at Knight's Bridge, on Main Elkhorn, 6 miles north of Frankfort, next Saturday, May 20th. Everybody, with his wife, daughters, sons, and most distant relations, is invited to attend. Speeches will be made on the occasion, by P. U. Major, S. N. Hodges, and others. The most extensive arrangements have been made to insure it the grand picnic of the season.

LIFE OF GEN. R. E. LEE, by JOHN ESTEN COOKE.—We are indebted to Mr. Moses Warren, Publisher and General Western Agent at Chicago, for a copy of the "Life of General Robert E. Lee," by Col. John Esten Cooke, the well known gifted Virginia author, and issued from the press of that first-class publishing house, D. Appleton & Co., of New York. The book is a large octavo of some 580 pages, handsomely printed, and copiously illustrated, and in all respects, got up in the highest style of modern typographical art. It is sold only by subscription, and our readers may obtain it by sending their orders to Moses Warren, No. 50 Dearborn street, Chicago.

It is almost needless for us to say anything to our Southern readers of the merits of a work prepared by Esten Cooke. In fact, that gentleman's "Life of Stonewall Jackson," his "Surry of Eagle's Nest," "Virginia Commanders," and many other productions historical, biographical, and historical-romantic have made his name and genius too well known to the whole country for his "Life of Lee" to need any commendation from us. When we have had time to read it, we shall be able to speak of it more critically and more in detail.

JUDGE COFER AND NEGRO TESTIMONY.—The Courier Journal publishes a lengthy charge of Judge M. H. Cofer, of the 7th district of this State, instructing the grand jury to admit negro testimony in their investigations. Judge Cofer says the negroes are citizens, and the right to testify is necessary for their protection and enjoyment of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States to all citizens, and the State judge is bound by the clause of the State Constitution which recognizes the Constitution of the United States as the supreme law of the land. Judge Cofer was Provost Marshal General of Joseph E. Johnson's army of the late Confederate States. We copy the Judge's charge in full in to day's Yeoman.

The military band, from the camp in South Frankfort, continues to discourse "eloquent music" every favorable afternoon to admiring crowds in front of the State House.

Gen. John Echols, the distinguished commander of the Department of Western Virginia at the close of the war, was on a visit to Lexington, Ky., last week, as we learn from the Press.

THE SERIOUS FAMILY AT MAJOR HALL.

The amateur performance last Friday night at Major Hall, for the benefit of the Confederate Monumental Association, though not so great a success financially as we had fully expected and earnestly desired, was otherwise an entertainment of which none of the performers, who so kindly gave their services for the occasion, have any reason to be ashamed. And, although the large hall was not more than half filled—owing, perhaps, to the many recent calls made upon the liberality of our citizens for objects of charity, both public and private—yet the hundred, or hundred and fifty persons present were from the very crème de la crème of Frankfort society; and the young ladies and gentlemen who appeared on the boards as the dramatis personae of The Serious Family, nothing abashed by the small size, but rather inspired by the selectness of their audience, acquitted themselves in a manner that would have led any stranger to believe that he was in the presence of a company nearly all the members of which were "stars" of no secondary magnitude. Nor are we alone in this opinion; we, in fact, but repeat the dictum of every one present with whom we have conversed. The Serious Family, though one of the best, is, nevertheless, one of the most difficult of the comedies that keep their place on the English and American stage; and yet it was rendered by this amateur company with telling effect—all its fine passages and striking situations were admirably represented; and, had the house been full, the performance would have elicited boisterous and unbounded applause, as it certainly did command the warm but comparatively silent commendation—the subdued applause—of the cultivated ladies and gentlemen present. We would be glad to go into particulars and bestow on each of the performers the discriminating praise which is their due; but, as they have chosen to hide themselves behind their initials, we must refrain. We cannot help saying, however, that we have never seen the leading characters of the play better represented, and the rest made as much out of their respective parts as was possible. Annibal Sleek was the exact, solemn, long-faced, sanctimonious, puritanical old hypocrite that the author intended. Lady Sowerby Creamly and Mrs. Charles Torrens, his dupes, were well conceived and well sustained throughout, the latter looking and acting the character of the living, faithful, but, for a while, misled, young wife to perfection. Sir Charles Torrens was the rich, gay, talented, and high-spirited young English gentleman to a T. Captain Murphy Maguire, we venture to say, was rarely, if ever, as well done by a professional as at Major Hall on Friday night. Lady Delmaine and Emma Torrens were two beautiful and graceful young ladies out of real life—the first a gay, high-spirited, dashing woman of fashion, but with a heart true to all womanly instincts; and the other young and impulsive, and perfectly natural in her passionate utterances at being crossed in love; and Frank Vincent was as true to the life and to the character drawn by the playwright as talent and a fine person could make him.

By-the-by, we have heard the question repeatedly asked by persons who were present of each other, "Who do you think acted the best?" and we have heard it answered as variously as there are leading characters in the play. The first one answered Lady Delmaine; the second replied Emma Torrens; the third, Mrs. Charles Torrens; the fourth, Captain Maguire; and so on.

We were permitted to insinuate a slight criticism, we should say to some of our young friends, that next time they would find it to their advantage, or rather that of the audience, if they would pitch their voices not too high, but so as to fill the hall, and speak slowly and distinctly enough for every one in the hall to hear. Every character in the play was dressed to perfection, the ladies splendidly and yet with admirable taste; and the whole "business" of the stage seemed to be well understood as if the parties had been familiar with it all their lives.

A "PROXY" FISH STORY.—The Louisville Ledger relates a tragic story of a piscatorial Louisvilleian, who, armed with "one of the finest reels ever manufactured in Frankfort," penetrated far into the bowels of Clark county, Indiana, where he was thoughtless enough to go fishing on a Sunday. This, of course, is a violation of the statute law in that State as it is construed to be, by many, of number 4 of the Ten Commandments (did Louisville fishermen or editors ever read those commandments?); and so, while our metropolitan district of the red was quietly, but without success, pursuing his sport on the Sabbath, with an occasional pull at his flask—"if our readers know what that is, and we shouldn't wonder if they did not—a constable came down on him, arrested and carried him before a rural Dogberry, who summarily sentenced him to the Jeffersonville Penitentiary for one year—meanwhile sending him to jail for an incidental "contempt of court," where for two days and nights he was heavily chained to a wall! According to the Ledger, the sentence to the Penitentiary would have been actually carried out but for a number of his friends a Louisville, who, hearing of his forlorn condition, rushed to the rescue, and induced Dogberry to let him off with a fine of $25, and the confiscation of his "flask" and contents, his cigars, Frankfort reel, and other fishing tackle—such are the delights of fishing in Indiana on a Sunday. Our Louisville angler might have known he would come to grief; for, it was never intended by the manufacturer of that famous Frankfort reel that it should be used to violate the Sabbath in any State—beyond the Ohio.

Attention is called to the advertisement of Mr. Chas. Hayden, who proposes to open a class for the instruction of youths and young men in penmanship. Mr. Hayden is well known as an excellent scribe, besides possessing the capacity to impart the art successfully to others.

We are indebted to Mrs. Julie Dival for a specimen of rhubarb plant from her garden, some of the stalks of which measured three feet in length.

RADICAL COUNTY CONVENTION.

After considerable effort and long waiting a Radical County Convention, of some forty or fifty people, black and white, mostly residents of Frankfort, assembled at the court-house in this city yesterday afternoon for the purpose of appointing delegates from Franklin county to their State Convention, which meets here to-morrow. W. H. Sneed was appointed Chairman, and Samuel R. Smith Secretary. On motion of Dr. Hatchitt, the postmaster here, the Chairman appointed the following named gentlemen a committee to draft resolutions and select delegates to the State Convention: John A. Bell, T. Pointer, E. T. Parrant, J. L. Scott, J. B. Lewis, J. G. Hatchitt, M. C. Johnson, and J. B. F. Stigers. Very soon after retiring, this committee returned and reported pretty much the same resolutions that Radical County Conventions elsewhere are adopting in this State, and particularly that one which commits the Radical party in favor of extraordinary privileges being granted by Kentucky to a Cincinnati railroad corporation. The resolutions were adopted nem con, of course, and the following delegates (we omit alternates) were appointed to represent this county in the State Convention:

FROM THE CITY.—T. J. Hutchinson, Saml. R. Smith, W. H. Sneed, W. H. Gray, O. Brown, J. G. Hatchitt, M. C. Johnson, Peter Smith, H. H. Trumbo, W. A. Gaines, H. G. Banta, John Thomas, and J. L. Scott.

PEAK'S MILE.—J. R. Gray and J. A. Bell. BALD KNOB.—Lloyd Hackett.

BRIDGEPORT.—E. T. Parrant and Jeff. Wilson.

BEXOS.—J. B. T. Stigers. FORTS ELKHORN.—H. M. Bradford and John Chambers.

The delegates were left uninstructed as to particular candidates, but were directed to vote for no man for any State office who would not pledge himself to canvass the State between this and the day of election. If the State Convention recognize the wisdom of this suggestion, we shall no doubt have a lively, contested canvass, which is exactly what every Democrat desires. Finally, the Convention recommended Mr. Samuel R. Smith as a member of the State Central Republican Committee.

On the whole, our Republican friends must admit that their County Convention was a tame, cut-and-dried, slimly-attended affair—a failure in fact. Let us hope that they will do better to-morrow.

We are indebted to the enterprising music publishing house of D. P. Faulds, No. 70 Main street, Louisville, for the following new music just issued from their press: "Restless Love, a Moroccan de Saloon," by C. Kinkel, inscribed to Miss Bertie Eoff, of Wheeling; and "The Parting Kiss," a song and chorus, words by Charlie E. Slagg, and music by Chas. Gimbel, jr., inscribed to Miss May M. Whitsett, of Pleasant Hill, Md.

The following paragraph, from the Louisville Commercial of yesterday, in reference to one of the incipient riots in that city, growing out of the admission of the negroes into the same street cars with the whites, is itself a manly act of justice by a political opponent to "Democrats and men who served the Southern cause":

"A MANLY DEED.—We witnessed the scene which took place Friday evening in front of the Willard hotel, and noticed several persons making an attempt to annoy the excitement and prevent a conflict. We have since been informed that all these gentlemen were Confederate officers, and that they subjected themselves to the insults of the mob by the active and manly part they took to prevent the trouble which was pending. We are glad to give publicity to this fact, as we believe it is an indication of the general feeling among Democrats and men who served the Southern cause, if the example set by these young gentlemen is followed we will continue to enjoy peace and freedom from riot, bloodshed, and violence."

RAILROAD DIRECT FROM KENTUCKY TO WASHINGTON CITY AND BALTIMORE.

EDITOR YEOMAN: A railway from the two last named places to Harrisonburg, Virginia, is already completed. Nature has marked out the way for its extension to Covington, Virginia, and the Legislature has granted a charter for the purpose. It is proposed to continue it on up Potts creek and down Stony to the mouth of Wolf creek, on New River; up Wolf creek and through Giles, Tazewell, and Russell, to the head waters of West Fork of Sandy, and down to Pike on Prestonsburg, Kentucky; and then to unite with the railways of Kentucky and Ohio and the West, making a grand Appian way to the Capital of the Union.

Will you examine the map; look at the geographical and topography; read in connection General Hunter's report to the stockholders of the Shenandoah Valley Railroad Company as to the practicability of the route as far as Russell, and then answer for us the questions?

1st. Is it not the route from Washington to the West?

2d. Will Kentucky unite with us, by connecting her railways with this, and give us a little substantial aid by subscriptions of stock, in land or money, along that portion extending into Kentucky?

3. Will the Legislature grant us a charter? VIRGINIA.

(From the New Orleans Picayune.) WASHINGTON AND LEE UNIVERSITY.

We doubt if there has ever been an institution of learning which possessed the sympathies and best wishes of an entire people as Washington and Lee University, at Lexington, Rockbridge county, in the Valley of Virginia, possesses the sympathies and best wishes of the people of the Southern States; and this feeling of deep interest is expressed by the people of the several States in vying with each other in endowing professorships in the different departments of the university.

This is no ordinary scheme. It is not to build up a State institution nor a church institution, neither is it intended that it shall interfere with the growth and development of State, church or other institutions of learning; but it is intended to make Washington and Lee University worthy the great names it bears, worthy the confidence and patronage of all parts of this country and of all the countries of the world, to make it an institution in which people of all political opinions and religious beliefs can unite in building up, developing and encouraging in every way; one in which a young man, after graduating in his own State or church school, can pursue his studies, in special branches, several years longer, and thus prepare himself thoroughly for literary, professional, scientific, commercial, manufacturing, mechanical, or agricultural pursuits.

One such university will exert a greater influence in elevating the standard of scholarship in our country than a dozen ordinary colleges or universities, and its growth and expansion will exert the most beneficial influence upon all other institutions of learning.

We are rejoiced to see the affections of prominent Confederate officers clustering around this institution, and the expression (see subjoined circular) of their interest in the success of the schemes for its endowment. They appreciate the importance of the enterprise, and they know that in the present impoverished condition of our Southern country we cannot have in each State such an institution as we would like to have, and under other circumstances might have; but by the people of each State uniting and endowing a chair in Washington and Lee University, we can have one that will meet most fully the wants of our section, for this is no new enterprise. The university already has a capital of about two hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($250,000), besides its buildings, apparatus, libraries, and real estate. It is upon this solid basis that the people in each of the several States are invited to unite in endowing a chair to bear the name of their respective State, thus identifying their State with the institution, and furnishing it with all the appliances for imparting thorough instruction.

This scheme is worthy the high source from which it emanated, and the hearty approval and support of all friends of sound learning.

"To our Friends in the United States: The undersigned fully concurs in cordially expressing a deep interest in the growth of Washington and Lee University, and especially in its plans for practical instruction in applied science and the arts."

The singularly beautiful country and beautiful climate where it is located secure to it unusual advantages. It is specially hallowed in historical associations, in earlier times as the recipient for their generous endowments, by George Washington and his fellow soldiers of the revolution; and is consecrated, in our times, as the scene of the latest labors of the life of Robert E. Lee.

His present President, General G. W. Custis Lee, is peculiarly fitted to carry forward the unfinished work of his illustrious father.

"The constitution of the University leaves it free from the control of any particular sect, State or section of the country."

"To secure an endowment sufficient to establish a University on the very broad basis for usefulness and renown, by contributions from the citizens of the several States for special professional, literary, or scientific purposes, practical, highly advantageous, and entirely feasible, and we earnestly commend it to our friends, not only in the South, but throughout the United States."

WATER-SNAKES.

(From Appleton's Journal, April 29.)

Although the existence of the great American sea-serpent may be reasonably doubted, that water-snakes are found in many parts of the world, though principally in the tropics.

Along the southern coast of Asia, in the waters that wash the shores of Hindostan, Siam, and the Malacca peninsula, they are in great abundance, averaging from three to six feet in length, and some of them present the same variegated hues that adorn so many tropical fish with all the colors of the rainbow. I classify these snakes with fish, because there are many peculiarities common to both. Like the fish, these snakes are furnished with gills, seek in the water for their food, will bite freely at a baited hook, and are capable of living for a long time, if not wholly, in the water. I have frequently met with them out of sight of land, and that this was no casual circumstance, is proved by the fact that they were swimming about in large numbers, hundreds of them being in sight at the same time. When not darting about after their prey, they generally swam along with their head and neck erected nearly perpendicular at an elevation of from six to twelve inches above the water. In order that the reader may obtain a better idea of them and their habits, I will describe a scene as it actually occurred:

At the time, I was attached to one of our government vessels, bound on a mission with a special minister to perfect old treaties, or make new ones, with the semi-barbarous powers of Southern Asia and the East Indian archipelago. During the passage of the gulf of Siam, our ship was becalmed near the island of Palo Oby, about three hundred miles from our destined port. The morning was fine and clear, not a breath of wind stirring, and the water so still that there was no perceptible motion to the ship—in fact, a perfect tropical calm. The water around us was literally alive with snakes of every imaginable hue. Some were darting along with the sinuous motion peculiar to their species, flat upon the water; but the greater number were nearly motionless, with head erect, as before described. Looking at those some distance off, it gave one the idea of an innumerable quantity of sticks, from two to four inches in diameter, floating hither and thither, with their upper ends a few inches above the surface of the water.

Our scientific corps, consisting of three surgeons, the hospital steward, and two lobby boys, immediately abandoned the interesting work they had been engaged in that morning, and hurried on deck, where nearly all hands were already gathered viewing the wonderful and unusual scene. I may add that they had been trying to poison an old monkey of a peculiar species, whose skin they wished to preserve in good order. As often as the vessel containing the arsenic was handed to the old brute, she would drink the contents down and hand it back for more. Finally, after swallowing enough to have killed fifty men, without being affected by it, she was drowned in a tub of water.

But let us return to the snakes. Every possible means was devised to capture some of them, scoop-nets, harpoons, buckets towing astern, slip-noses trailing from yard-arms and jib-boom, but all in vain—they were too active and agile. If caught in a bucket or net they sprang out before reaching the deck; some were cut in two by the harpoons, and they all seemed to have as much horror of the noise as would a condemned murderer. At last somebody suggested trying a hook and line, and soon a dozen or more were towing overboard from every available part of the ship.

These efforts were not immediately crowned with success, and the surgeon applied for a boat, in order that he might try his scoop-nets at close quarters, but this the old Commodore peremptorily refused, for the snakes were supposed to be poisonous, and two or three of them jumping about in a boat full of men might prove fatal consequences. The men were ready for the fun, but, as subsequent events proved, it was well that the Commodore remained firm.

Finding that salt meat for bait was useless, for the snakes frequently came up and snatched it without hitting, a chicken was killed and one hook supplied with a morsel. Scarcely had it touched the water when there was a rush, a splash of many gleamed light, and in a few seconds the first victim was landed on deck. Here he jumped around furiously, but did not seem to possess the power of locomotion that his land brethren have. The first proceeding was to test the question of poison. The armorer, furnished with a large pair of blacksmith's tongs, caught the snake firmly just back of his head, and with a pair of pinchers pulled out the hook. A chicken was then brought and held so that the snake could close his jaws upon him just under the wing. A quick bite was given, though the snake's neck was still firmly held in the tongs.

The surgeon had more success with this unfortunate fowl than he had been favored with in the case of a monkey, for in less than four minutes it was lying dead on deck. More chickens were now baited, and soon a dozen snakes were secured, the largest one being five feet nine inches long and fourteen inches in girth around the body. The others were of different lengths, but the average was about four feet. When brought aboard, the armorer's tongs and a sharp knife being brought into requisition, they were soon rendered harmless, and their bodies placed in spirits for future scientific observation. These snakes all bore a general resemblance to the common fresh water eel in everything except color, which was as variable as that of the drying dolphins.

Old sailors sometimes spin yarns about these snakes getting aboard of ships at anchor by worming their way up along the cables and entering the hawseholes, but such yarns may be classed with those concerning "the great American sea serpent," and the manufactured monster of Silver Lake.

The First Stain.

Did any of our young readers ever think how little it takes to stain their characters? A single drop of ink seems a very small thing, yet dropped into a tumbler of clear, pure water, it blackens the whole. And so the first oath, the first lie, the first glass, may seem very trifling, yet, depend upon it my young friends, they leave dark stains upon your character. Look out for the first stain. Remember that small vices lead to great crimes, and that every little vice is a stain upon your character; and remember, too, that if you continue to indulge these vices, the stain grows darker until your whole soul is blackened. It is a very easy matter to brush aside the single drop of water, but when drops enough have been united to form a torrent, it sweeps on with irresistible force. So with the little vices; it is a comparatively easy thing to rid ourselves of them at the beginning, but if we allow ourselves to indulge them, they will show a mighty power over us.

Young friends, look out for the first stain.

The Men who Succeed in Business.—By no means the least useful and interesting portions of a live newspaper are found in the columns edited by the public, that is to say, the advertising department. No matter how well the editorials may be written, or how graphically the news may be presented, one of these carefully elaborated or judiciously condensed columns "come home to the business and bosoms" of some readers more effectively than new advertisements do others. When the advertising columns are occupied by dry, prosy, long affairs, repeated day after day and month after month, people tire of seeing them. They are not features of busy, but of stagnant life. But, when advertisements, new every morning, short, crisp, and to the point, meet the reader's eye, he feels that the world moves, and he is inspired to move with it. There is something inspiring and cheerful, encouraging and hopeful, in the very look of well-filled advertising columns. The men who succeed best in business and keep up with the times are those who not only read the advertisements diligently, but who do their share in keeping them "ever charming, ever new."—Philadelphia Ledger.
